

From the Pastor's Desk
Commentary on Luke 17:11-19

This passage tells us that Jesus was traveling to Jerusalem when ten lepers found Him and asked for mercy. They wanted to be healed. Jesus told them to go find the priest. Jesus' command is significant because these leprous men would only go to a priest to be pronounced healed if they were free of this leprosy (Leviticus 14). The fact that they started walking to the priest reveals that they believed Jesus was going to heal them. They were not healed when they started walking. They were healed as they were going to the priest.

We are told that they were "cleansed." The Greek word that is translated as "cleansed" is KATHARIZO. It simply means to "cleanse." It was a term used to refer to a leper who was healed and no longer had the disease,

"This shall be the law of the leper in the day of his cleansing. Now he shall be brought to the priest . . . (NASB) " Leviticus 14:2

The same expression that is found in Leviticus 14:2 was used in Luke so that the reader would understand that the lepers were healed from leprosy and ready to meet the priest. As soon as the tenth leper saw that he had been healed, he returned to Jesus to praise Him. The Greek word that is translated as "whole" or "well" comes from the Greek word SESOKEN. It means "to rescue, save, or heal." That is, the man's faith had not only resulted in his being healed, he was made "whole" as well, or "saved".

The protestant reformer Martin Luther described FAITHFUL WORSHIP as this tenth leper moment. Worship isn't an obligation; it is the return of a thankful heart to the source of its healing. It is an awakening to new possibilities of a healed life lived close to Jesus. It is delighting in what we have seen, the healing that, in spite of everything, has given us back our lives.
